LITERARY NOTES.

Rudyard Kipling has written a weird elephant | HONORS PAID TO THE MEMORY OF JUSTICE story, in which Little Toomai, the elephant keeper, is taken by Kala Nag, his monstrous beast, to see the dance of the elephants in the jungle-that most wonderful moonlight revel of the East.

The first section of Louis Fagan's splendid "His tory of Engraving in England" is now ready. tion II is to be issued in December, and Section III next April. The work is illustrated with 100 typical examples reproduced from rare and unique prints in the British Museum, and has a rich store of biographical sketches and critical notes.

Mr. Frank Stockton is one of the authors whose fancies in their wanderings sometimes fall upon a hidden truth. "In one story," Mr. Stockton says (in "McClure's Magazine"), "I had a character whose occupation was that of an analyzer of lava, speci-mens being sent to him from all parts of the world. this connection a foreigner inquired of him if there were any volcanoes near Boston, to which city he was on his way. This preposterous idea was, of course, quickly dismissed in the story. But received a letter from a scientific man in New-England who thought I would like to know that far from Boston, but in a spot now covered by the ocean, there existed in prehistoric times an Several important drawings and studies by Rossettl are reproduced for the first time in the book on "Dante G. Rossetti and the Pre-Raphaelite Movement" which is coming out in London.

The second and concluding part of the diary describing the journey of Napoleon to St. Helena appears in the November "Century." It is much more interesting than the first part giving more or less significant details of Bonaparte's conversations and presenting the exile as a supremely selfish and particularly vulgar little man. During the first two months of his detention in the island he lived in a small detached building near the cottage of a Mr. Balcombe, who had two young daughters in their early teens. "These young ladies," says Mr. Glover. "in a few days became perfectly familiar, and the General seemed highly pleased with their naivete, particularly that of the younger (a pretty girl, and a most complete romp when out of sight of her father). He occasionally so completely laid aside his imperial dignity as to romp with these young es, who during such diversions as "Blind-man's

This duality in his mind which constitutes his in ellectual advantage is the defect of his character. He is futile in action, because in every path he is confronted by the horns of an eternal dilemma, and is apt to come to the conclusion that nothing is very much worth the while. If he be inde-pendent of exertion, his life commonly runs to aste. If he turn author, it is commonly from ecessity; Fielding wrote for money, and 'Don Quixote' was the fruit of a debtors' prison. . The sense of the humorous is certainly closely illed with the understanding, and no race has and next to them the Spanish-both inclined to gravity. Let us not be ashamed to confess that, if we find the tragedy a bore, we take the profound-est satisfaction in the farce. It is a mark of sanity. Humor, in its highest level, is the sense of comic contradiction which arises from the perpetual comment which the understanding makes upon the impressions received through the imagina-

Dr. George Macdonald is a sick man, but, nevertheless, a busy one. He has not been able to lect-ure or preach for many months, but he has nearly ed another novel. He is obliged to spend his winters in Italy.

The poetical works of Samuel Butler, edited by Mr. Brimley Johnson, will be published shortly as the new volume of the "Aldine Poets." The text of HE COMPELS A WOMAN TO GIVE HIM ABOUT "Hudibras" has been thoroughly revised and reprinted for the first time from the last editions published during the author's life. Mr. Johnson iso supplies a new biography and bibliography.

A new edition of Mr. H. W. Mabie's literary essays is coming from the press of Dodd, Mead & Co. That this is the fifth edition proves that the four volumes have been uncommonly cuccessful. The books have been revised and enlarged and each will be illustrated with three photogravures.

The second volume of the new edition of "Pepys's Diary" contains a drawing of his wife from the bust in the British Museum. Master Pepys, it will be remembered, highly praised the beauty his helpmeet, though it would hardly be considered remarkable in these days.

THE INCOME TAX PROPOSITION.

IT WILL NOT BE BORNE.

From The Baltimore American.

We think it may be asserted with tolerable certainty that the American people will not submit to an income tax, so long as it is possible to obtain money enough to run the Government by taxing the goods of foreigners, who are anxious to underseil American goods and cripple American industries.

NOT A POPULAR COMBINATION. From The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

When the Democrats impose an income tax and restore the duty on sugar, they will not have a fighting chance left in any Northern State.

ITS ASSOCIATIONS ARE BAD.

It is in the United States an unpopular tax. It has associated with it experiences which occurred during the time of the civil war, when perjury upon a wholesale scale was committed for the purpose of avoiding taxation, and there is a current belief founded on this experience that it is a system of taxation highly demoralizing to a business community.

resolutions adopted at the recent meeting of the bar held in the first week of the present term of court. After the judgments of the day had been announced, Attorney-General Olney read the resolutions of the bar and spoke in part as follows:
"These resolutions justly estimate and express the loss sustained, not merely by the judiciary, not merely by the profession, but by the entire com-munity as well. Justice Biatchford was the model of a competent, well-trained, laborious, conscien-tious, and, above all, modest public servant. "If it be asked what was Justice Blatchford's chief characteristic as a judge, it may be said to consist in the strictly business quality of his work. By that I do not merely mean that he was specially conversant with the multifarious affairs of trade as daily transacted in the commercial centres of the world and dealt with the questions arising out of them with peculiar intelligence and skill.

"His judicial work was business-like in that its sole aim was the right determination of the particular case in hand. He never made its decision an occasion for philosophic disquisition. He never undertook by an opinion in one case to settle princi-ples for other anticipated cases. He never indulged in 'large discourse looking before and after,' much less in any flights of rhetoric. It satisfied his idea of judicial duty that the controversy before him was settled aright by the application of a rule of law broad enough to cover the case. Thus, if he was not brilliant, he was safe; if he did not make large contributions to the science of jurisprudence, he won respect for the law and its administration by the uniform righteousness of the results reached in actual cases. It must add to our admiration of Judge Blatchford that he tolled assiduously, both at the bar and on the bench, not from necessity, but from choice; that the allurements of an ample fortune neither belittled his aims nor benumbed his energies; and that in his hands wealth was but the supplement and aid to an industry and zeal rarely excelled even under the spur of poverty." Chief Justice Fuller, in receiving the resolu-tions for the court, said:
"To Mr. Justice Biatchford the discharge of duty was an impulse and toll a habit and since to ladies, who during such diversions as "Binarama ladies, who during such diversions and parent processes and anything and everything to him her lively imagination dictated, asking every possible question, and he answering without the slightest apparent reserve." There is not much trace of the grand, gloomy, and peculiar captive about this picture.

The next number of "The Century" is to contain an essay left by Lowell on "The Five Indispensable Authors." In the selections on humor, wit, fun and satire in the current number of the magazine we find these characteristic passages:

"The advantage of the humerist is that he cannot be a man of one idea—for the essence of humor lies in the contrast of two. He is the universal who have the makes himself quite as much laurels.

"He makes himself quite as much with the displayed uncommon aptitude in the administration of the maritime law and of the law of patents, his grasp upon the original principles of the one and his mastery of details in the other alling him in largely contributing to the development of both. His experience in adjudication and in affairs bore abundant fruit during his incumbency of a scat point his bench, and in the domain of constitutional investigation and exposition he won new laurels.

"He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'bestor' "He did not attempt in his judgments to 'be tional investigation and exposition he won new laurels.

"He did not attempt in his judgments to bestow conclusions on after generations," yet when the 430 opinions, to be precise, as he would have been, in which he spoke for the court, contained in the volumes of our reports from the latter part of the 195th to the close of the 149th, are examined it will be found that he dealt with large questions, in many of them with a breadth and luminousness of treatment, and at the same time with a circumspection and sagacity which entitle them to high rank as judicial compositions, and will make them monuments to be seen hereafter of those concerned in looking about them for guidance in the present by the wisdom of the past. And, as rightly indicated in the thoughful tributes paid to him today, the memory of this conscientious and faithful public servant will be perpetuated, not through his decisions alone, but in the profound conviction the contemplation of his career will ever produce that he kept, to use the language of another, the picture of the useful and distinguished Judge constantly before his eyes, and to a resemblance of which all his efforts, all his thoughts, all his life, were devoted.
"Toon the loss to us personally in parting all his efforts, all his thoughts, all his life, were devoted.

"I'pon the loss to us personally in parting with this beloved friend and helpful fellow-laborer we do not care to dwell. We take up our burdens again, conscious of the absence of the relief his participation should have afforded, but feeling as to him the truthfulness of the thought: 'Above all, believe it, the sweetest canticle is Nunc Dimittis, when a man hath obtained worthy ends and expectations."

"The minutes and resolutions of the bar and the remarks of the Attorney-General will be entered on our records, and as a further mark of respect the court will adjourn until to-morrow at the usual hour."

A MASKED ROBBER AT FISHKILL.

$1,000 AT THE POINT OF A REVOLVER. wburg, N. Y., Nov. 13.-A man masked with red bandana handkerchief visited the home D. H. Monks at Fishkill-on-the-Hudson about 8 o'clock on Sunday evening. Mrs. Monks was the only person at home, and the stranger, presenting a revolver at the woman's head, ordered her to keep quiet and to give up all the money in the house. She gave about $290 in cash and two checks amounting to about $290 to him. The robber then ordered Mrs. Monks to unlook the back door, by which he made his escape. The fe' htened woman at once gave the alarm, but the man has not yet heen found. He is described as weighing about 179 pounds, about five feet seven inches tail, and wearing a dark suit and slouch hat.

The checks were on a local bank, and payment was stopped on them. A large building was in the room at the time, but after suifling at the introder, lay down, as if familiar with him. This fact leads some people to suspect that the fellow belongs in the neighborhood. a revolver at the woman's head, ordered her to

MR. LYON CONTINUES SURVEYOR. HIS RESIGNATION HAS BEEN ACCEPTED, BUT THERE IS NO ONE TO ATTEND TO HIS DUTIES.

The business of the Port of New-York was put in a peculiar and uncertain condition yesterday by the action of the Assistant Secretary of the Tronsury, William E. Curtis. This action no doubt was the outcome not of official necessity but of in-the outcome not of official necessity but of individual feeling on the part of the Assistant Secretary toward George W. Lyon, the Surveyor of the Port. The Surveyor yesterday received a letter from the Treasury Department, signed by Curtis, and dated on November II and mailed at 8 p. m. that evening. The letter informed him that his resignation as Surveyor, which was sent to the President on July 6, had been accepted, to take effect on November II. That was last Saturday.

When the Surveyor went to his office yesterday this letter was waiting for him. Under all previous regulations there is no way in which the office can be run without a Surveyor. The Deputy Surveyor, who acts in the absence of the head of the department, loses all authority the instant the Surveyor is removed, because he is a personal appointment of the Surveyor and acts only for him.

Mr. Lyon took the matter in his own Fands yesterday and refused to leave the office. He sent a telegram to the Treasury Department explaining the predicament. Mr. Lyon and his deputy, Samuel Blatchford, both performed their duties yesterday, and they will undoubtelly do so until the Surveyor's successor is appointed and qualifies.

A NOBLE GIFT TO METHODISM.

MISSION PROPERTY IN CHILI TURNED OVER TO THE CHURCH BY MESSES, FOWLER AND GRANT.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 13.-Shouts of joy lowed by the singing of "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow," with vigor and fervor, pene-trated the heavy granite walls of Wesley Church this afternoon and caused the passersby to stop and listen. Within, the members of the General Missionary Committee of the Methodist Church were celebrating the acquisition of the republic of Chill as a portion of their territorial demain, which, as Bishop Newman afterward expressed it, marked an epoch in the history of the Church. Hitherto the mission work in that portion of South America has been unwork in that portion of South America has been under the control of a chartered concern, known as the Transit and Building Company, and maintained in the main by Anderson Fowler, of New-York, who has large business intercats in Chicago, and Richard Grant, of New-Jersey. Between them these carnest Methodists have given in excess of $100,000 for the spread of Methodism in Chili, and their efforts have been so well rewarded that in addition to a small army of converts the mission has property valued in the neignourhood of $200,000. This field, and this property absolutely free from debt, they turned over to the General Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church through the committee to-day, stipulating only that the mission work in the field should be conducted in the future as in the past, on a pure and simple self-supporting plan. In accepting the gift the committee adopted a resolution apprepriating $25,000 to Chilian work, contingent upon a special fund being raised for that purpose. It was explained that the acceptance was conditional upon the approval of the General Conference, which does not meet for four years, but, as Bishon Fowler expressed it amid loud laughter, "We will all be in Ficaven—or some other place before any objections are heard."

After the doxology had been sung Mesers, Fowler and Grant were excepted to the biatform and introduced to the delegates, who rose to great them and loudy applauded.

When the committee adjourned this afternoon after four days labor it had completed just one-half of its work by making appropriations of $467,000 in round figures for the support of domestic missions. This was a reduction of $90,000 on the estimates and the figures of last year. There were some der the control of a chartered concern, known as
